

MOB BOSS' BROTHER FINALLY LIFTS LID ON BIZARRE MURDER PLOT

Marilyn Monroe was killed on orders of Mafia godfather in 'perfect' hit

A TOP mobster's relatives have revealed shocking new details of Marilyn Monroe's death—they say Mafia hitmen killed the movie goddess with a lethal suppository.

On the 30th anniversary of her death, a new book, Double Cross, written by the brother and godson of late underworld boss Sam Giancana, recreates a terrifying murder scene and a bizarre CIA-Mafia plot to silence the love-scorned starlet who knew too much.

Marilyn, distraught over a fizzling romance with then-Attorney General Robert Kennedy, was threatening to expose the secret affair as well as the intimate liaison between the White House and the underworld.

"She was, perhaps, a loaded gun waiting to go off," co-author Sam Giancana, the mobster's godson, told Entertainment Tonight. "Once she decided that she was going to go public...the CIA requested that Marilyn Monroe be eliminated. And Sam Giancana accepted the contract."

But the Chicago crime boss had his own agenda—to expose the love affair between Marilyn and Bobby, rendering the attorney general impotent in his legal war against Chicago's ruling organized crime family.

Bobby spent the evening with Marilyn at her Hollywood apartment on Aug. 4, 1962. A few days earlier, Giancana had had sex with her there and bugged the apartment, hoping to catch Bobby in a compromising position.

Just before midnight, after the attorney general had left, four Mafia thugs allegedly broke into Marilyn's bedroom, held her down and planted the lethal suppository. They then left her for dead—with evidence of Bobby's presence there only hours old.

A new book claims Marilyn Monroe was killed by Mafia hitmen, who inserted a barbiturate suppository into the movie goddess. Their motive? To induce her lover, Attorney General Robert Kennedy, to stop harassing organized crime families.

Sam Giancana was master-mind of plot.

"She struggled at first," writes Sam Giancana and his father, Chuck Giancana, the mobster's brother. But the thugs' "rubber-gloved hands easily forced her nude body to the bed.

"Calmly and with all the efficiency of a team of surgeons," they inserted a rectal suppository filled with Nembutal, a sleep-inducing barbiturate powerful enough to induce death.

Marilyn's nude body was found on her bed the next morning and L.A. authorities said her death was "probably suicide." They found a high level of barbituates in her bloodstream and an empty vial of Nembutal on the bedstand.

"It was the perfect weapon with which to kill Marilyn Monroe," the Giancanas wrote. "A suppository was as fast-acting as an injection but left no needle mark."

Former Los Angeles prosecutor John Minor told the TV show Hard Copy that medical examiners found a purple discoloration on the lower part of the star's colon, where the suppository would have been placed.

Much to the Chicago Godfather's disappointment, FBI agents quickly removed all traces of Bobby's presence at the apartment, the book says.

The secret might have otherwise died with the mob boss in 1975, when Giancana was gunned down outside his Chicago home. But the mobster had confided in one man, his brother Chuck. "I want the truth to come out about my brother," Chuck told his son, Sam. "It's part of American history and a part which the government seems determined to hush up."

Connie Mielke: Danger warning.

OOOPS! SHOWERS TURN TOWN INTO REDHEADS

There's a new red menace—and it's driving women crazy. Taking a shower is turning them into redheads.

The culprit is the town water supply in Botkins, Ohio—pop. 1,200—which scientists say has a build-up of iron, lime and magnesium deposits.

Though the water is said to be safe for drinking, it wreaks havoc on the hair, especially for permed or color-treated tresses. While some hair merely gets a copperish hue from ex-posure to the water, in severe cases, blond locks turn brassy red.

When nothing they tried would get the red out, desperate Botkins women even resorted to using toilet bowl cleaner—dunking their hair in buckets of a diluted solution of the cleaner.

Some experimenters said they knew the strange practice was working when their hair began to smoke. Connie Mielke, owner of the Hairitage House beauty salon in Botkins, was horrified when she heard that people were resorting to using toilet bowl cleaner on their hair.

She quickly warned residents that they were foolishly risking letting dangerous poisons enter their bodies through their scalps.

"I can't believe the number of people using it. It's worse than I thought," says Connie.

"They're not even comprehending the toxic poisons in their system. And their hair definitely looks dry. It's the craziest thing I've ever heard!"

Birth control vaccine aims to stop pregnancy for years at a time

A LONG-TERM birth control vaccine now being developed could prevent women from getting pregnant for two to five years at a time, say researchers.

Dr. John Kerr of the University of Virginia School of Medicine, says the vaccine causes a woman's body to develop antibodies that attack male sperm and make it infertile.

"Ease of administration suggests that a contraceptive vaccine would offer effective, reliable birth control," says Dr. Kerr.

The vaccine, which would be given by injection or pill, is now being tested on baboons, with funding by Ortho Pharmaceuticals Corporation. Human trials are due to begin in two years.

a large, loving Italian family in New York.

"The woman who raised me told everyone she was my mom. But she sort of let me in on the truth because she always had me call her 'Aunt Mom.' Marilyn visited whenever she was in New York. She was always in contact with the family and with me. I loved the times she came over."

Greene—who says she was a teenager when she discovered Marilyn was her real mother—was born in 1946 when Marilyn was just launching her career. She says her father was a New York attorney, now dead. Monroe died of a drug overdose in 1962, at age 36.

A 45-year-old office worker claims she is Marilyn Monroe's secret daughter. Shapely blonde Nancy Maniscalco Greene says Marilyn gave birth to her when she was 20, then hid her existence from all but her closest friends.

"She was ambitious and thought having an illegitimate baby could only hurt her career," Greene says.

Greene also claims that Marilyn was the secret daughter of notorious Mafia godfather Vito Genovese.

"Officially, I didn't exist," Greene says in an interview on the television show, Hard Copy. "But except for that, I had a happy childhood. I grew up in Greene says she met some of Marilyn's famous friends, including Frank Sinatra and Dean Martin.

Now an office temp in Honolulu, where she shares an apartment with two other women, Greene says she has a birth certificate and other documents to support her claim. "I could prove it in court," she asserts. "But I can't get into court because I have no money."

Joanne Carmen, an actress and close friend of Marilyn's in the 1960s, confirms that Marilyn had a child.

"I was talking to Marilyn about a pregnancy once and she said, 'I was pregnant. I had a baby, a little girl. And they took it away from me.'"
